GERMAN INDIGNATION AGAINST FRANCE IS NOW FLAMING HIGH

Circles Close to Government Accuse France of Seeking Morocco War

"PARIS WANTS WAR"

Such Charge Made in Bold Headlines in German Paper; Conferences Planned

By International News Service

BERLIN, Jan. 11.—While Chancellor Hitler planned a series of conferences with his aides over the Franco-German crisis in Morocco, German indignation against France flamed high today, as circles close to the government accused France of seeking Morocco war.

Dr. Walther Schmitt, foreign head of a German newspaper known as Hitler's organ, and a close advisor of the Chancellor on foreign affairs, published on the front page of today's edition an editorial under the blazing headlines "Paris Wants War in Morocco."

It was understood the editorial was published after a consultation with Hitler, who returned from his Bavarian Alpine retreat to the capital today.

Meanwhile, Hitler, reported somewhat uneasy under the tone of the Paris press regarding German activities in Morocco, conferred at length with his lieutenants.

Britain's new proposals for a ban on foreign volunteers in Spain were made known to Hitler as he reached Berlin. The first Nazi reaction to the British suggestion was skepticism.

French charges of a German military invasion of Spanish Morocco in contravention of international treaties, met with denials from Spanish rebel leaders today, as well as skepticism in London and elsewhere.

The British foreign office took the charges as greatly exaggerated, while in Berlin the government professed indignation and hinted at a diplomatic demarche against France as a "disturber of European peace."

Meanwhile, Great Britain's move in clamping down an unilateral ban on enlistment of British volunteers in

Reappoint Special Officer For Borough of Yardley

YARDLEY, Jan. 11.—With David H. Anderson presiding for his second term as president of the Yardley borough council, the first meeting of the year was held Friday evening in the council room.

The question of the special officer for the borough was again brought before the meeting by Joseph J. McKenna placing a motion on the table for the re-appointment of the special officer Thomas J. South for the year, with George P. Brown seconding the motion. During the lengthy discussion which followed, complaints were registered against the officer, stating that when he was needed he was unable to be found. A case was cited when about two weeks ago, a vagrant became ill while sleeping in the Town Jail, and officer South was summoned to assist by taking the victim to the Bucks County Home in Doylestown, but he was not located until arrangements had been made for another party to transport the man to the home. To account for his whereabouts at the time, Officer South explained that he was in New Jersey.

The question as to the jurisdiction of the officer was also brought up for question, some maintained that the Chief Burgess Chester Wetzstein had the full authority over the officer, while others claimed that it was a question for the entire council, since it was in their power to create the office. Officer South was re-hired for the coming year at the salary of $100 per month.

Raymond Ruth was named janitor of the municipal building in place of Samuel Smith, who has been custodian for a number of years. A number of bills were ordered paid, and some discussion was held as to the accumulation of funds to pay off the bond issue. Suggestions were made for the increase of taxes next year.

It was the question of over-spending which caused James A. Dilliplane to resign his post as councilman at the meeting three months ago, followed a month later by the resignation of Robert Barbour, chairman of the finance committee. George P. Brown was then named to succeed Barbour, while Mahlon B. Knowles was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Dilliplane.

David H. Anderson named the following committees to serve for the coming year in various branches of the borough government: Finance committee, George P. Brown, Alex. J. Neely, and Walter L. Dilliplane; streets, Alexander J. Neely, George P. Brown and Mahlon B. Knowles; property, Walter L. Dilliplane, Joseph J. McKenna, and Arthur W. Blaker; lights, Joseph J. McKenna, Walter L. Dilliplane and Alex. J. Neely; sanitation, Arthur Blaker, Walter L. Dilliplane and George P. Brown; ordinance, Alex. J. Neely, Arthur W. Blaker, and Mahlon B. Knowles; Joseph J. McKenna and George P. Brown.

Some Think American Will Succeed the Pope

By Frank Gervasi

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
VATICAN CITY, Jan. 11.—Although admitted in even the most pro-American Vatican circles to be remote, the possibility arose today that the next Pope may be an American.

With typical Roman realism, speculation as to who will eventually succeed to the throne of St. Peter, is frequently heard, as hope dwindled today that Pope Pius XI can long survive his critical illness.

Romans, who frequently voiced "If the Pope dies, we will create another," mentioned Patrick Cardinal Hayes, Archbishop of New York, and William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, as likely candidates for succession.

High Vatican sources repeated reports mentioning the two American Cardinals as possible successors to the present Pontiff with the statement: "If for any reason the next Pope is not an Italian, he is certain to be an American."

At least, this is the first time in the memory of Vatican functionaries that officials have expressed themselves in favor of an American successor to the Holy See.

SEPTEMBER CONTRIBUTED VARIETY TO THE NEWS

Fairs in Progress, Fatal Accidents Occurred; Prominent Men Spoke Here

THE NEWS IS REVIEWED

News in great variety was presented readers of The Bristol Courier during September of 1936. Doylestown Fair was in progress, drownings and fatal accidents occurred, prominent speakers appeared here, and many unusual events took place. The review of the news for that month follows:

1st.—A decrease was shown in the enumeration figures for Bristol borough as compared to the number for 1935. The decrease was 140, dropping from 2621 to 2481.

Announcement was made that American Legion Cadets of Robert W. Bracken Post had secured third place in the junior drum and bugle corps contests at the American Legion state convention at Johnstown. The local lads had won first place for four consecutive years previous.

Thomas J. South, constable at Yardley, lost a bid for re-instatement when Yardley council met. The dropping of the officer was due to an economy measure.

2nd.—Enrollment for the initial sessions of Bristol public schools was chalked at 2,453, with more expected to attend classes.

Tullytown residents were aroused over the old trolley tracks, which still remained on the main street, and which were claimed to have caused many accidents.

3rd.—At a testimonial dinner in the Bristol Presbyterian Church, Bristol Lodge of Elks honored Bristol's two tennis stars, Nelson Green and Herbert Lawrence. The latter won the singles championship of the city of Trenton for 1936, and the two won the doubles championship.

4th.—Work of removing the piers which once carried the steel and wooden bridge over the Neshaminy Creek at Croydton, was nearing completion. Removal began in 1934.

Admits Intoxication; Exonerates Motorist

Informing officers that he was "intoxicated" and that he did not wish the driver of the automobile which struck him blamed in any way, Daniel Larsen, of Penn Valley, thus disposed of an accident case on Saturday evening.

Highway patrolmen from Oxford Valley station report that Larsen was injured as he walked along Bristol Pike, near the King Supply Company, Tullytown, Saturday at 6:30 p. m. The sedan was driven by Paul Grady, Brown street and State road, Tullytown.

Larsen was treated at the private hospital of Dr. J. Fred Wagner for a deep laceration of the scalp, and abrasions of the wrist. When questioned as to how the accident occurred, Larsen is said by officers to have replied that he did not know exactly, but that he was intoxicated and didn't want them to hold the driver of the machine. No arrest was made.

How to Have the Flu and Get Away with It

The American Red Cross nursing service offers these tips to victims of influenza. If the instructions are followed the chances of developing pneumonia are few, and all who come into contact with the patient will be properly safeguarded. In the center picture at the top is shown the proper method of taking a footbath. At the first sign of flu (weepy eyes, damp nose) the patient should be put to bed. A hot mustard footbath is given. At lower right, the proper way to bathe a patient. Under no circumstances should the patient leave the bed for a bath. At top, left, the proper use of handkerchiefs. Use only paper and dispose of it immediately after use. A home-made incinerator for the papers is shown at the lower left, made of a discarded coffee can. At top, right, is another important illustration. Stay in bed even if you begin to feel better. Light nourishment, according to doctor's orders, is all that should be taken.

NEWTOWN, Jan. 11.—The Newtown New Century Club is planning for a project under sponsorship of the American Home committee, this to be in charge of Miss Rhandena Armstrong, on February 10th.

The club will be very busy during the next few weeks, according to the activities booked on the club calendar.

Each Thursday at 2:30 p. m., the general federation of Women's Clubs sponsors a broadcast over the NBC network, with Mrs. Roberta Lawson as the speaker. Mrs. Danser's broadcast will be a part of this program.

The local club-women during the holidays filled 32 baskets with food, etc., distributing them to needy families.

In connection with the Junior Club work the name of Mrs. Frank Fabian has been suggested by the Juniors as second adviser, and this has met with approval of the senior group.

"Love On the Run" Is At Grand For Two Nights

Joan Crawford and Clark Gable have the time of their lives in their new co-starring picture, "Love on the Run," which opens tonight at the Grand Theatre.

Miss Crawford, stunningly photographed, has never been more vibrant than in her present role of the American heiress who on the verge of marrying a nobleman finds out just in time that it is her money rather than herself that he is after.

In an attempt to escape from interviewers she rushes pell-mell into the arms of Gable, playing an American correspondent, and consequently finds herself immersed in a series of hair-breadth escapades involving Franchot Tone as a rival reporter, and a clever pair of Continental swindlers. In the tangled events that ensue Gable captures not only a first rate story for his paper but also a charming bride.

DRIVER ARRESTED

When two cars crashed three miles west of Morrisville, on Bristol Pike, yesterday at 12:15 p. m., George Moyer, 3607 Rhawn street, Philadelphia, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving. His car and that of Lewis J. Perry, Railroad avenue, West Trenton, N. J., crashed, on a slippery roadway. Patrolman Butcavage, Oxford Valley sub-station, made the arrest, and a hearing is pending.

CO. MEDICAL DIRECTOR WARNS AGAINST SPREAD OF COLDS AND GRIPPE

As a means of checking the spread of colds and grip throughout Bucks county, Dr. Claude L. Taylor, Doylestown, Bucks county medical director, appeals to the people of the county to observe several suggestions in order to prevent the spread of the epidemic during such unseasonable weather as there has been during the past few weeks.

It is stated there are thousands of cases of colds and grippe throughout Bucks county, and Dr. Taylor suggests the following:

"Cover the mouth with a handkerchief when coughing and sneezing."

"If you have a cold, keep away from a crowd or contact with other people."

"Immediately change damp clothing and do not let the body become chilled."

"Keep the house or work place at an even temperature and well ventilated, but prevent drafts."

"Call your doctor when you notice the first symptom of acute illness."

Yardley Residents Fill In Holes in Boro' Street

YARDLEY, Jan. 11.—With residents of Main street enjoying a newly-improved thoroughfare from the railroad station to Afton avenue, little thought is given to the residents on the other side of the Afton avenue intersection, who have before their homes a street where trolley rails have been removed from their bed in the middle of the street, leaving holes in some cases 18 inches deep.

Letters have been written to the State Highway Department with whom the responsibility rests, for its repair, and all the replies bring the same "as soon as funds are available for such purposes the street will receive proper attention."

Failing to receive the necessary relief from rough travel, the citizens have taken the situation in their own hands, and with shovels, etc., have filled and levelled off the holes by their own efforts. An exceptionally bad spot in front of the home of Albert Haydock has been levelled a number of times by his family; while William Whitehead and others have assisted with the easing of the bumps at various places along the half-mile road.

DOYLESTOWN FIRE LOSS PLACED AT ONLY $150

Company Answered Only 14 Alarms in Borough During The Past Year

WENT ON OUTSIDE CALLS

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 11.—This borough had a fire loss in 1936 that any community in the United States would proudly claim, the total loss being but $150, with a total property value of $7,994,811, according to the annual report of Fire Chief Frank Stover. The town has a population of 5000.

The Doylestown Fire Company was called out to only 14 fires in 1936 within the borough limits, although a total of 37 alarms were answered. The loss of $250 was actually not personal property but a lumber pile.

W. Carlisle Hobensack was re-elected president of the fire company at the annual meeting.

Fire Chief Stover stated that a loss of $300 was suffered when a lumber pile was destroyed on a property, east of the borough, which is the largest loss of the year and involved no destruction of actual property.

The loss for 1935 was slightly less but 1936 would have set a new low record had it not been for the loss incurred by the lumber pile.

"I think that, for a borough with a population of 5,000, Doylestown residents can throw their chests out. It is a very good two-year record for any borough," said Fire Chief Stover.

In 1935 Doylestown Fire Company fought 38 fires in the County Seat and surrounding neighborhood.

Four disastrous fires the local firemen helped fight were Ottoway House, Spanish Coffee House, Ottoway store and a Wycombe residence.

Statistically the number of fires and the month in which they occurred are as follows:

January, five; February, three; March, three; April, two; May, three; June, four; July, two; August, two; September, two; October, two; November, five, and December, four.

The type and number of blazes are as follows:

Two dwellings, two stores, two overheated stove pipes, four chimneys, tar barrels, one gas stove, two chairs, four barns, three private garages, one gasoline station, one oil burner, defective wiring, heater explosion, lumber pile, motor truck and nine grass and wood fires.

There were seven grass fires in 1935.

Establish County Office To Assist Employers

The Pennsylvania Unemployment Compensation Office has established a county office for the guidance of employers in Bucks county. The county office is located in the Ely Building, Clinton and Ashland streets, Doylestown.

The staff at this office is especially trained for the purpose of assisting employers in the preparation of the unemployment compensation forms, which are required to be filed before January 31, 1937.

Employers are urged to take advantage of the service of this office in the preparation of these forms, and thus prevent the necessity of paying a penalty for failing to comply with the provisions of the Act.

They are also warned that certain racketeers have been working throughout the State by posing as unemployment experts for the sale of forms and service for filling out these forms. Every employer in this county affected by the Act is encouraged to take advantage and use the facilities of this office which has been set up for this specific purpose.

CONGRESS AGAIN

The vacation from politics and controversy the country so thoroughly enjoyed last November has terminated. The Seventy-fifth Congress met under mildly apprehensive circumstances because of growing labor wars in the motor industry. If prolonged, these disputes will have unfortunate effects in this basic industry as well as in steel and numerous accessory lines whose payrolls are the nation's backbone. Regrettable as is this situation, it is far less tense, far more susceptible to negotiation and quick settlement than the nightmares of Europe.

From the legislative standpoint neutrality is probably the most pressing question. There is already disagreement between the administration and Congressional leaders as to form. Mr. Roosevelt wants discretionary power for himself and the State Department to meet emergent developments. Congress, it is indicated, still believes it can write the rules to encompass any situation.

Whether Congress will proceed along more conservative lines in legislating for home consumption has been widely debated. It is less a matter of conjecture, however, since the President restated his social objectives. He will renew the fight for federal control over labor to reduce working hours, to prescribe a minimum wage and to abolish child labor. The administration wants to retain its monetary powers. Extension of executive authority to fix the gold content of the dollar and continuance of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund will be sought before these provisions of the gold reserve act of 1934 expire January 30.

Relief we still have with us. Notwithstanding diverse sentiment in Congress as to the advisability of restricting Federal unemployment relief, the President has indicated that $500,000,000 will be required to continue work relief until June 30. What the President wants with respect to relief and labor legislation he probably will get. Labor will be as aggressive in Washington as it was in the campaign.

Inexorably involved with relief is the question of a balanced budget and taxation. Prophets, amateur and professional, predict there will be no new taxes; that some concessions may be made in the undistributed profits tax; that the tax on capital gains may be abated; that social security taxes may be modified. There is certainly no prospect of reduction in the income tax for individuals and corporations. The farmers, who delivered so nobly, are looking for some form of continued federal control over crop production and soil conservation. The present program will expire at the end of the year. The states are then supposed to take over, aided by federal subsidies. Few have regarded the prospect with enthusiasm.

The lack of an effective minority in Congress has been regarded with apprehension. Representative Snell, leader of what is left of the House Republicans, has announced there will be "no surrender" of the rights of the minority. Very good; but there isn't much Mr. Snell and his brave little band can do.

A classroom in a trailer is being given a trial in Montana. It marks a wholly new departure in education—bringing the schoolhouse to the truant.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol, July 8, 1875. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Constable Yardley captured a horse thief last Friday. He had received a telegram in the morning, giving the description of a horse and wagon stolen from the Pennsylvania Hospital for the Insane at Philadelphia. A horse and wagon that answered the description having been seen to pass through the town, the Constable procured a team from the livery stable of Thomas Roberts Co., and started in pursuit. The thief was captured and the property recovered at Morrisville. The man was brought back to Bristol, had a hearing before Esquire Wharton, and was placed in the lock-up for the night. Between half-past one and three o'clock in the morning he effected his escape by undermining the stone door jamb. The Constable went down at half-past one, and found the prisoner apparently fast asleep; but upon his return at three o'clock the bird had flown. The prisoner who gave him the name as George Lawrence, was a well-dressed man, with black hair and whiskers, and was evidently an old hand at the business. During his examination before the 'Squire, he talked a little incoherently, indicating that his mind was either out of balance, or that he was endeavoring to leave that impression.

The Fourth of July was celebrated as peacefully as any that ever passed in our ancient borough. Whether it was owing to the fact that a detail of special volunteer police had been made to preserve order, or that the near approach of the Centennial made our people feel the importance of conducting stolen from the Pennsylvania Hospital for the Insane at Philadelphia. During his examination before the 'Squire, he talked a little incoherently, indicating that his mind was either out of balance, or that he was endeavoring to leave that impression.

The Fourth of July was celebrated at the Bridgewater Asylum on Monday, at eleven o'clock. The large and pleasant lawn before the house was alive with the children of the school, all nicely dressed in uniform. Seats were arranged under the trees, and after a parade by the boys, with drums and colors—all were orderly seated, when a prayer was offered. The Declaration of Independence was read, and a short oration delivered by Mr. Peter Hope, of Bristol.

The ordinance regulating the speed of locomotives through the borough is pretty generally observed, although there are instances of a violation of its provisions. It is understood that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company have notified conductors and engineers that all fines against the company, will be deducted from the wages of the offending parties.

Dr. Adams starts for Cresson Springs next Monday to attend the annual meeting of the state dental society.

HULMEVILLE—William Lott and William Vanzant were very unfortunate last week. The former had his hand badly mashed by a large stone falling on it while he was working in the quarry; the latter caught his hand in a hay-cutter, cutting it severely.

The Fourth of July was celebrated with less demonstration than formerly. . . . At four o'clock in the afternoon the long-talked-of tub-race came off. Quite a number of people were congregated on the shores of the Neshaunim, immediately above the dam, to witness the extraordinary feats of the participants. . . . In the evening at six o'clock, a meeting was held on the spacious lawn of Mr. E. G. Harrison. . . . The exercises were appropriate to the day, consisting of an original poem, composed and delivered by Mr. A. VanHorn; the reading of the Declaration of Independence by Mr. William Johnson, an oration by Mr. Charles T. Harrison, and a declaration by Master Harry Gillingham. Col.

"LUXURY MODEL" by MAY CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS

On the train, enroute to her home in Los Angeles from college, lovely Elizabeth Harmon meets handsome Gerald Bruton, young stock broker. At luncheon, when Elizabeth compares college to prison, a hard look creeps into Gerald's face, and, later, when a man approaches their table and exclaims, "I never expected to see you in this part of the world!" he turns white. At home, Elizabeth's stepfather, Colonel James McCarthy, forbids her to go out with Gerald, so she arranges to meet him clandestinely. Over champagne, at the swanky Miramar, Gerald tells Elizabeth of his love for her. She is deliciously happy and, gazing at the stars, waxing poetical. Had she looked at Gerald at that instant, she would have seen a queer, strained look in his face. Their tete-a-tete is interrupted by the sudden appearance of two friends of Elizabeth, Nancy and Jasper, who are celebrating their engagement. The four young people clope to Yuma, Arizona, where a double wedding is performed. At home, the Colonel sits up waiting for Elizabeth to give her his ultimatum. He slumbers in his chair.

CHAPTER V

He awoke at a quarter to seven in the morning, aching in every bone. He had been roused by the sound of old Martha moving in the kitchen. Swearing softly, he tipped to Elizabeth's bedroom.

The bed, smoothly turned down, had obviously not been slept in. The room was empty.

He became alarmed. Kidnapings . . . attacks by bandits . . . even murder . . . why, things like that were common occurrences to young girls nowadays, so that one actually hated to open one's newspaper!

He called old Martha. She was equally perturbed. In answer to his questions, shot at her like bullets from a machine gun, she described to him, falteringly, how the girl had been dressed when she had left the house yesterday.

He telephoned the Sheriff's office. "This is Colonel James McCarthy of Ventura Boulevard speaking. My stepdaughter has been missing from home all night. I'm afraid an accident has happened. Will you put out a call for her?"

"Certainly, Colonel. Her name and a full description please."

He said heavily: "Elizabeth Harmon. Age 19. Tallish. Slim. And blonde. Dark blue eyes. Carries herself well. Fair hair worn in a knot at the back of her neck. She was wearing a sort of a pink suit and a light hat, with grey gloves and shoes."

"Okay. We'll notify the different stations. And we'll put out a call to the radio cars, Colonel. This is Inspector O'Brien speaking. Give me your phone number and I'll call you back whenever there's news."

Three hours passed before the telephone rang.

"Inspector O'Brien speaking. A young lady answering your description left the Burbank Airport at 4:30 this morning. She was accompanied by two gentlemen and another young lady. They left by plane for Yuma, Arizona."

The ceremony was over. A double wedding. The brides kissed each other. Jasper kissed Elizabeth after he had kissed Nancy. The latter, with a little pang of envy that the other bridegroom was so much better looking than her own, and without waiting for him to take the initiative, kissed Gerald heartily.

"The photographers are waiting outside. Come on, everybody, and let's get it over with. Then for a darn good breakfast. I'm starving," she cried.

"We don't wish any publicity," Gerald said sharply. He wheeled round on the famous "marrying judge" of Yuma. "Your Honor, will you send the photographers away at once?"

The terseness in his voice startled Elizabeth. Nancy, avid to be in the limelight, had vanished, dragging Jasper outside.

The judge looked uncertain.

"Why, there isn't any way of dodging these fellows, unless you stay right here," he said apologetically.

"Oh, Gerald, what does it matter? People will have to know sooner or later—" Elizabeth began. Hadn't she burned her boats? Wasn't this as good a way as any of letting her stepfather know? Fearing the worst, he would probably be relieved that there had been a legal ceremony.

"I won't have it. It would be extremely bad for my business," fairly snapped her bridegroom. "Furthermore—" he lowered his voice to Elizabeth, but the words pattered like pellets of hail on her heart—"I consider such a way of announcing the news to your people and my people would be most discourteous."

The judge went for his wife. She suggested a remedy. That they breakfast in the next room, and with her head on his shoulder and sleep too. But she was afraid of disturbing him.

Or was it something more? For as the hours wore on, she felt a sense of disquiet that was as much mental as physical. She told herself there was no reason for it, that Gerald loved her as she loved him.

But as she looked at his face, relaxed in sleep, the mouth half open, the jaw slack, cheeks sagging as his head drooped towards his chest, it was as though she looked on the face of a stranger. She tried to throw her mood off, but it persisted.

The sun was directly overhead when, after more than five hours' driving, they reached San Diego. Gerald dismissed the car close to a big hotel on the ocean front, paying the driver and tipping him lavishly.

When man and machine had gone,

"Why, Gerald, how are you? Have you brought your wife along?"

then slip away by a back entrance. Gerald ordered a car to come around for them in fifteen minutes. His uneasiness communicated itself to his bride as they drank their coffee and ate bacon and eggs.

"Infernal busybodies!" Elizabeth was hurt. She would have liked to shout her happiness from the housetops.

The car arrived. He would not even permit her to go in search of Jasper and Nancy, to bid them goodbye.

But as they whirled along the desert roads, seawards, Elizabeth's misgivings left her. Wasn't it perfectly natural that Gerald, being a real he-man, should loathe publicity?

Sitting beside him in the back seat, she viewed his handsome, absorbed profile with a thrill of pride. Married! At nineteen! To the most fascinating man in the world!

The immortal lovers of history passed before her mental vision, changing pattern like a kaleidoscope. Paolo and Francesca, Dante and Beatrice. Like Young Lochinvar, Gerald had come out of the West to carry her off!

She essayed conversation. But he was in no mood for it. He answered in monosyllables.

Of course he was tired, what with being up all night, and the excitement of getting married.

The sun was climbing high on the dry parching. Elizabeth's head began to ache intolerably, from the heat, and the champagne they had drunk last night and in the plane this morning, and the rocking of the car, for the chauffeur drove fast.

Gerald slept. Elizabeth would have loved to curl up on the seat

TWO DOGS CHEW DEER FATALLY, IT IS REPORTED

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 11.—For the second time within ten days the menace of dogs attacking deer in Bucks county has been brought to the attention of the Game Protector and sportsmen, it became known this morning.

Pursued for some time and practically eaten alive, a handsome buck was attacked by two dogs—a German shepherd and a mongrel collie—in Tinicum township on Thursday and had to be killed by the Game Protector.

The deer was pursued by the two dogs until he was exhausted and when he became tired was attacked by the dogs which began literally to eat him alive.

Seeing the helpless animal, a trapper, who was carrying a gun with him shot at the dogs to frighten them off of the wounded animal, but so badly had the buck been chewed that it was impossible to save his life.

Game Protector Warren Fretz was notified by the trapper, who asked him to investigate the case, and directed that the deer be killed.

Carrying on the investigation, Game authorities in the county believe they know to whom the dogs belonged and steps for prosecuting owners of the animals are under way.

"Hunters, as well as sportsmen, are serving notice to the owners of dogs in Bucks county that any dog attacking a deer will be killed and the owners prosecuted, which means a fine of $100 in the case of a deer," said a game authority this morning.

"It is too bad that most people do not know enough about the game laws so they know just what to do in order to rid the county of this frightful menace of dogs attacking deer."

"To see those dogs try to eat that deer alive was one of the most horrible sights I have ever seen," said the trapper who attempted to ward off the dogs. He told the Game Protector that he believed one of the dogs was injured, but was unable to kill them because of an inadequate firearm.
